It gives me great pleasure to welcome all of you to the School of Nursing, Li Ka Shing Faculty of Medicine to participate in the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum. Once again, we are very glad and excited to have many leaders of the nursing profession from around the world gathering here to share the latest innovations and developments in the healthcare system, nursing practice and research. We are pleased to host this year's Forum with the support of 36 co-organisers, which are leading universities/institutes from Australia, Canada, China, Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, the Philippines, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Nursing professionals play a pivotal role in today's healthcare system. Nurses devote themselves to the caring of individuals of all ages, families, groups and communities, sick or well and in all settings. While the demand for nurses continues to surge in terms of quantity, the rapidly-changing health needs and ongoing healthcare reform have also led to compelling and legitimate expectation for better healthcare knowledge, quicker response to the unique characteristics of patients' needs, and a call for greater innovation in the teaching, research and practice of nursing.

This year's forum with the theme, "Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education and Research", brings together scholars and professionals from different countries and cultures to share their experiences and solutions, should therefore be invaluable to all participants. I would also like to take this opportunity to express our gratitude to the Tien's family, for supporting the Grace Tien Lecture in the Forum.

May I take this opportunity to wish you a fruitful and insightful experience in the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum.

Professor Peter Mathieson

President and Vice-Chancellor
The University of Hong Kong

On behalf of The University of Hong Kong, I would like to offer a very warm welcome to all participants at the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum.

The Forum will bring together international and local leaders in nursing research, nursing education and clinical practice to share scientific discoveries, advance their knowledge and improve the quality of care. I hope that both overseas experts and local speakers will take advantage of this occasion to exchange ideas on innovations in nursing developments and to foster collaborative partnerships with their international peers.

I would like to commend all those who have worked so hard to make this Forum possible, and offer my congratulations to the School of Nursing on what promises to be a productive and successful event.

I take enormous pleasure welcoming you to the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum.

Modern health care is becoming ever-more interconnected and inter-professional. The disciplinary divisions of the past are increasingly seen as barriers to providing the best care for patients. Given this, it is most fitting that this forum is supported by 36 co-organisers, including leading universities and institutes from around the world. We all face similar challenges, which makes it compelling that we learn from each other, as aptly embodied in the forum's theme of "Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education and Research."

You have chosen a most propitious time to visit HKU. We have just concluded our Faculty's 130th anniversary celebrations with the Congregation and Homecoming Dinner last evening. One hundred and thirty years ago, in 1887, the forerunner to the Faculty, called the Hong Kong College of Medicine for Chinese, was established. This was not only Hong Kong's first medical school, but also its first institution of higher learning. When The University of Hong Kong was founded in 1912, the College was amalgamated into the Faculty of Medicine. Throughout its history, the Faculty has been inextricably linked with the development of medicine in Hong Kong, supporting its advancement and making significant contributions to healthcare at the regional and global levels, with wisdom, compassion and commitment.

Nowhere is this more evident than in our nursing programme. What began as a part-time undergraduate programme over 20 years ago has blossomed into a fully-fledged School that is internationally well-regarded. I rely on your collective support to bring our School to the next level of excellence.

On behalf of the Organising Committee, we are most delighted to welcome you to the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum. This is one of the celebratory events of the Medical Faculty's 130 Years of Medicine in Hong Kong. It is our honour to host this event, and co-organise with renowned universities/institutes around the world.

The theme of the Forum this year is "Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education and Research", aligning with the mission of our School to generate and disseminate knowledge which will advance the practice and discipline of nursing. This Forum offers an excellent platform to bring the local and overseas practitioners, educators and researchers together, to work hand-in-hand for creating an advanced nursing and healthcare environment to the local, regional and international community.

Our sincere gratitude goes to all distinguished speakers for their insightful presentations, all delegates and guests for their active participations and all sponsors for their enduring supports to the Forum. We would also like to take this opportunity to extend our heartfelt gratitude to members of the Organising Committee who dedicated efforts and invaluable input towards this Forum. Wishing you a professionally rewarding and pleasurable stay in Hong Kong!

Congratulatory Message from Guest of Honour

Professor Sophia Chan

Secretary for Food and Health
Government of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region

Nursing is an honourable profession which helps people to get and stay healthy. Nurses constitute the backbones of all healthcare systems around the world. In Hong Kong, more than one out of every two registered healthcare professionals is a nurse.

Nowadays, nursing requires years of rigorous and sophisticated training, continuous specialised education, and self-betterment in order to keep abreast of the latest medical advancement and technologies. The Hong Kong SAR Government is committed to working closely with education institutions in nurturing top-class nurses for the benefit of the whole community. In this connection, the School of Nursing of the University of Hong Kong (HKU) has always been a key partner of the Government in nurturing high quality nurses for the community through its holistic and diversified education.

I wish to extend my heartfelt gratitude to the School of Nursing of the HKU for its significant contributions to Hong Kong's healthcare sector since its establishment in 1995. I am also pleased to warmly welcome everyone to the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum which provides an excellent platform for delegates worldwide to share experiences and insights in nursing research, education and clinical practice.

I sincerely wish that the School of Nursing of the HKU would scale new heights in its future endeavours and that the Forum would be a big success.

Professor Sophia Chan

CENTRO ESCOLAR UNIVERSITY, THE PHILIPPINES

Centro Escolar University (CEU)- School of Nursing beams with pride to Co-organize the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum.

This year’s theme: “Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education, and Research” reflects the three tier folds of excellence where nursing professionals ought to support and pursue. We laud this avenue that gathers international and local leading authorities in the three domains to present and discuss valuable insights, innovations, and developments. The arduous task of harmonizing practice, education, and research towards the creation of a tomorrow that is relevant and beneficial to humanity is indeed exceptional. Hand in hand, we shall work to turn our visions to a reality.

The CEU- School of Nursing remains steadfast in its commitment to create an environment and infrastructure that supports faculty, teaching, scholarship, research, service, and practice so that together we can assure generations to come a bright future.

We thank The University of Hong Kong for spearheading this event, and we encourage the participants to bring their learning into a full circle by furthering their insights, sharing their ideas, and putting their knowledge into action.

Congratulations and Mabuhay!

CHIBA UNIVERSITY, JAPAN

Congratulations on the Medical Faculty's 130th anniversary of the Medicine in Hong Kong. It is an honor to be invited as a co-organizer of 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum. Chiba University Graduate School of Nursing has pursued Japanese nursing science incorporating culturally appropriate care. Although each country in Asia has unique culture, there are many common issues such as a declining birthrate, aging of society, disparity society, spread of infection accompanying globalization, and mega-disasters.

The theme of the Forum, “Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education and Research” is an exciting theme. It is significant that nursing researchers and educators collaborate with these issues in Asia. In addition, resolving these problems, the importance of inter-professional education /work and interdisciplinary research is increasing.

I hope that this forum will lead to new collaboration fruitful in innovating healthcare in Asia and worldwide.

Professor Nobue Nakamura

CHULALONGKORN UNIVERSITY, THAILAND

On behalf of the faculty, staff, students, and alumni of Faculty of Nursing Chulalongkorn University, I am delighted to extend my warmest greetings to the distinguished nursing leaders, the delegates, and the conference organizer of the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum, Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education and Research.

The theme of the forum this year reminds us the challenges of our nursing profession to strengthen nursing engagement in global health. This conference offers an excellent platform for nurse scholars, scientists, and clinicians to share their research and clinical practices. I am confident the Forum will generate a significant step for collaboration among nursing academics and clinicians.

I would like to close by wishing you a fruitful conference and wish you the best for your future endeavors.

KAOHSIUNG MEDICAL UNIVERSITY, TAIWAN

On behalf of College of Nursing, Kaohsiung Medical University, it is my great pleasure to congratulate the hold of the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum. With the high technology and artificial intelligence are increasing adopted in health care system, sustaining the value of nursing- caring is a challenge for nursing discipline. Therefore, theme of the forum "Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education and Research" has its special meaning. Nursing professionals need to work together and integrate the knowledge of nursing practice, education and research to create humanistic environment to improve the health outcome of population. Through the interacting of international peers, I believe many innovating ideas will be created and will be seeds for the future of nursing discipline. I appreciate the School of Nursing, The University of Hong Kong heartily for hosting the Forum and provide great opportunity for communicating opinions among international nursing professionals. THE UNIVERSITY OF MANCHESTER, THE UNITED KINGDOM

On behalf of the Division of Nursing, Midwifery and Social Work at the University of Manchester it gives me great pleasure to congratulate Professor Chia-Chin Lin and the School of Nursing at The University of Hong Kong on this, the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum. It has been very impressive to observe the rapid development of health research generally, and particularly nursing research, at The University of Hong Kong. Only through strong national and international collaborations will we ensure that nursing research achieves the highest standards of excellence and patient impact. The objectives of the Forum are ones that we can all share and the themes are universal. I am honoured to be a Co-organiser and very much looking forward to joining you in December.

Professor Dame Nicky Cullum

Professor and Head

Division of Nursing, Midwifery and Social Work

THE UNIVERSITY OF MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA

On behalf of the Department of Nursing at The University of Melbourne I wish to congratulate the organizing committee of the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum along with School of Nursing, The University of Hong Kong for hosting this year's forum. With the theme “Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education and Research” this Forum reflects our shared philosophy that clinical practice and practice-based research are integral to the educational preparation of nurses at all levels of professional practice. The Department of Nursing at The University of Melbourne is honored to be included as a co-organiser. We look forward to participating in the forum presentations and to hearing from international leaders and innovators in nursing research, scholarship and clinical practice.

Professor Marie Gerdtz

Associate Professor and Head

Department of Nursing

THE UNIVERSITY OF TOKYO, JAPAN

Congratulations, the Medical Faculty's 130 years Medicine in Hong Kong and the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum! How excellent works to hold hands among nurse researchers, nurse practitioners, and different field scientists, in order to develop nursing practice, education, and research! We are happy to participate in such works and would value the prominent leadership of School of Nursing, The University of Hong Kong. We expect to take one step forward in Nursing Sciences through discussion in this International Nursing Forum.

Global Nursing Research Center (GNRC), Graduate School of Medicine, the University of Tokyo commenced operations on April 1st, 2017 as the first research center for Nursing in Japan. The GNRC has clear goals and objectives to foster young researchers who promote cutting-edge research at the global level with the active collaboration of industry, government, and academia. We are grateful to have a chance to introduce the GNRC to you in this Forum. Please do not hesitate to contact us if you are interested in joint research with the GNRC.

We would like to have this occasion promote future-oriented relationship among all the delegates, and let us create nursing innovation hand-in-hand.

Professor Kiyoko Kamibeppu

Professor and Head

Division of Health Sciences and Nursing

Graduate School of Medicine

UNIVERSITY OF BRITISH COLUMBIA, CANADA

The School of Nursing at The University of British Columbia is proud to join with this diverse and esteemed assembly of nursing educators in co-organising the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum. As the oldest university-based nursing school among Commonwealth countries, we congratulate The University of Hong Kong's Medical Faculty on celebrating 130 years of Medicine in Hong Kong. Like you, we are enthusiastic about inspiring and supporting nurses to promote health equity and lead solutions to today's complex health issues both at home and globally. To that end, and on behalf of our dedicated researchers, practitioners, and educators, we welcome honoured speakers and eager participants from around the world to this distinguished event. We also take this opportunity to congratulate the Hong Kong International Nursing Forum on its seventh year of setting a scene for the best and brightest among us to congregate, exchange ideas, and to "create tomorrow" together.

Professor Elizabeth Saewyc

Director and Professor

UBC School of Nursing

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO, CANADA

On behalf of the Lawrence S Bloomberg Faculty of Nursing at the University of Toronto, I would like to extend our warmest congratulations on the organization of the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum. The objectives of fostering innovations in nursing practice, education and research, in order to improve health outcomes for all, and within an international collaborative forum, are both aspirational and inspirational. I have no doubt every participant will find this event highly valuable.

Professor Linda Johnston

Dean and Professor

Lawrence S Bloomberg Faculty of Nursing

XI'AN JIAOTONG UNIVERSITY, CHINA

On behalf of School of Nursing, Xi'an Jiaotong University, I would like to extend my sincerest congratulations on the 130 Years of Medicine of Li Ka Shing Faculty of Medicine and the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum which will be held on December 18-19, 2017 in Hong Kong.

With the focus on "Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education and Research", I believe the forum will contribute to the development of nursing profession both nationally and internationally. As a long term collaborator of your school and a Co-organiser of the forum, I am very proud of your tremendous achievements in nursing education and research. We are all looking forward to attending this fabulous event, and I wish you all the success in this event.

Professor Li Xiaomei

*Dean and Professor
School of Nursing*

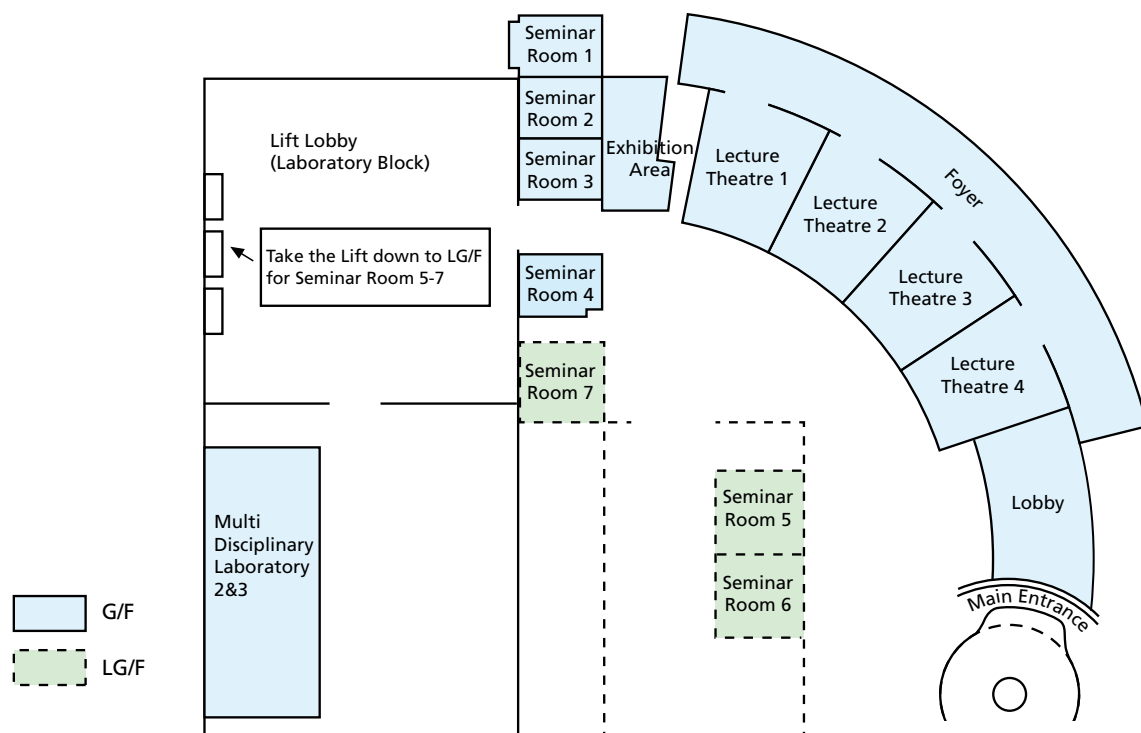

YONSEI UNIVERSITY, SOUTH KOREA

On the behalf of the Yonsei University College of Nursing, I would like to send warm greetings and congratulations on the occasion of the 7th Hong Kong International Nursing Forum in 2017. As the integration of academic knowledge and practical skills in nursing is a significant asset to our profession, I am confident that this forum on "Hand in Hand Creating Tomorrow: Nursing Practice, Education and Research" will carry out a meaningful work in international nursing, enabling the sharing of important advanced nursing knowledge and experience. I wish all the best for the success of the forum and hope that many will take part in this exciting event to meet and connect world famous nursing scholars.

Nursing and Nurses of the Future

With the aging of population and rapid advancement in technology, the healthcare environment of the future will be rapidly evolving. Healthcare needs and ways to deliver health care will be different from those of today. The required skill sets and talents of the future nurses will not be the same. The questions of what, who & how should we start preparing for the future become a major challenge that has to be addressed today.

Professor Afaf I. Meleis

Professor of Nursing and Sociology and Dean Emerita, School of Nursing University of Pennsylvania, the United States

Over the course of more than five decades, Dr. Afaf I. Meleis has demonstrated a profound passion for pushing the boundaries of nursing science, cultivating the next generation of healthcare leaders and improving women's health. As the Dean of the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing and Director of the School's WHO Collaborating Center for Nursing and Midwifery Leadership (2002-2014), she fostered a voiced, empowered community dedicated to making an impact on global healthcare through multidisciplinary partnerships that are advancing nursing science, education and practice.

Before Dr. Meleis made her move to Philadelphia, the world-renowned medical sociologist was rounding 34 years at the University of California at San Francisco, where she was a professor and where she held several administrative positions, including chairing the status-for-women committee and acting as assistant dean for academic programs, all while teaching and mentoring hundreds of students and conducting influential research on women's health.

A leading expert on immigrant and women's health, Dr. Meleis has dedicated her career to ensuring vulnerable populations are given a voice, particularly women who are burdened by societal inequities, multiplicity of roles, differential compensation and rewards and the gender divide. She used this knowledge to redefine women's work and contributions and to develop Transitions Theory, which continues to be used globally and is translated into policy, research and practice.

In addition, her research and writings in over 200 interdisciplinary publications on these topics, as well as on the structure and organization of nursing knowledge, have had an impact on advancing global health, women's health, culturally-competent practice and on the epistemological analysis of the discipline of nursing. She is also the author of 50 chapters, 7 books and numerous monographs, proceedings and policy papers. Her books continue to be used internationally, chief among them, Transitions Theory: Middle Range and Situation Specific Theories in Research and Practice and several editions of the ground breaking Theoretical Nursing: Development and Progress, with a 6th edition expected to be published in 2017. Her co-edited book, Women's Health and the World's Cities, innovatively examines the relationship between global urbanization and women's health and is just one example of her far-reaching research, as it was widely disseminated through international networks, conferences and launches, which in turn inspired collaboration and change.

A reflection of the international impact of her work is also evident in her world-wide consultations, invited keynotes and mentorship of students, faculty, clinicians and administrators. Her leadership in the International Council on Women's Health Issues played a central role in inspiring scholarship in women's health and in bringing together world leaders to form partnerships to improve the lives of women. Her leadership is also evident in the many boards and committees she actively participates in, including her role as a board member of Aga Khan University and a board member of The Buck Institute for Research on Aging. She is a member of the National Academy of Medicine and co-chaired its Global Forum on Innovation in Health Professional Education, as well as a board member of The Josiah Macy Jr. Foundation Faculty Scholars program. She co-chaired the Harvard-Penn-Lancet Commission on Women and Health, the results of which were published in a full Lancet issue in 2015. She is also a member of a CSIS Global Health Policy Center Task Force on Women's and Family Health, which will provide the newly elected U.S. President and Administration with a road map, addressing how they can best contribute to the spectrum of issues impacting the health of women and families globally.

Dr. Meleis is the recipient of numerous honors and awards, as well as honorary professorships and doctorates. Among them is a Doctorate of Medicine from Linköping University, Sweden; a Doctor Honoris Causa from the University of Alicante, Spain; and the distinguished Honorary Citizenship of Oporto, Portugal. In 2015 she received the American Academy of Nursing Living Legend Award and the Sigma Theta Tau International Nell J. Watts Lifetime Achievement in Nursing Award, and she was inducted as an Honorary Fellow in the National League for Nursing's Academy of Nursing Education.

Dr. Meleis graduated Magna Cum Laude from the University of Alexandria (1961), earned an M.S. in nursing (1964), an M.A. in sociology (1966) and a Ph.D. in medical and social psychology (1968) from the University of California, Los Angeles.

Through her life's work, Dr. Meleis has simultaneously raised the visibility of the nursing profession and the growing importance of addressing the social inequities facing women around the world.

GRACE TIEN LECTURE

18 December 2017 (11:15 - 12:30) Lecture Theatre 2 & 3

Envisioning the Future: Innovation, Interprofessionalism and Influence

This is both an inspiring and a challenging time for nursing as a discipline and as a profession. Nurses are positioned to lead in making a positive impact on the access to and provision of quality, community based, equitable care for populations globally. To realize and maximize the capacity of nurses, both individually and collectively, in enhancing the health of populations while curbing costs, the education and practice of nurses must be driven by frameworks that encompass social justice and equity, as well as by an awareness of health care challenges and opportunities created by global demographic, social, epidemiological and environmental transitions. Opportunities for nurses to shape the future of health care could be harnessed by making the necessary changes to education and practice, which could drive and maximize nursing innovations in research and practice, voiced leadership in interprofessional education and practice and the development and implementation of impactful social and health policies that drive progress toward a universal culture of health and wellbeing and meeting the Sustainable Development Goals.

Professor Patricia Davidson

*Dean, School of Nursing
Johns Hopkins University, the United States*

Patricia Davidson, PhD, Med, RN, FAAN, joined Johns Hopkins School of Nursing in September 2013 as Dean. Since then she has introduced a new pre-licensure degree program, Master's Entry into Nursing, and progressed advanced practice degrees to the Doctor of Nursing Practice, doubled the school's PhD program intake and increased engagement with communities, locally, nationally and internationally. A global leader in cardiac health for women and vulnerable populations, Dr. Davidson has an established program of research in supporting individuals living with chronic conditions and developing innovative models of transitional care. A primary objective of her work has been to improve the cardiovascular health of underserved populations through development of innovative, acceptable, and sustainable initiatives internationally. She is a leader in advocating for palliative care for non-malignant conditions. Since 2003, Dr. Davidson has secured over $25 million in competitive research funding from national and international funding bodies, and co-authored 460-plus peer-reviewed journal articles, 25 book chapters, and more than 150 peer-reviewed abstracts. Dr. Davidson is Counsel General of the International Council on Women's Health Issues and is a member of Sigma Theta Tau International's Institute for Global Healthcare Leadership Advisory Board, Mentorship Committee and Foundation Board Chair. She is a Fellow of the American Academy of Nursing, the American Heart Association, the Preventive Cardiovascular Nurses Association and the Australian College of Nursing.

Shaping the Image and Value Proposition of Nursing for the Future

Globally nurses are integral to not just providing clinical care but advancing nursing research, innovation, and advocacy for better healthcare. The image of nursing is frequently misrepresented and fails to provide a contemporary and accurate image of activities in policy, practice, education and research. Nursing is undergoing an extraordinary transformation. While nurses know this and see it in the work they do every day, there is a profound need to educate the public about a changing nursing landscape and expanding opportunities. As we face an international nursing shortage and an increasing demand for health care services, a focus on recruitment and retention is critical. The Johns Hopkins School of Nursing has launched a longitudinal campaign, "The New Script of Nursing". Through using a multi-media digital approach, stereotypes are challenged and we illustrate the value proposition of a nursing career across numerous settings. Leveraging social media and a wide range of engagement activities is important in profiling the work of nurses as well as motivating and inspiring both future and current nurses. Shaping the image and describing the value proposition of nursing is critical in ensuring a competent, confident, and credentialed workforce for the future.

Professor Meinir Krishnasamy

Creating Tomorrow through Co-design

Despite remarkable advances in cancer medicine that have delivered extraordinary benefits for some groups of people, for many patients, tomorrow will still be today. Excellent communication skills; access to timely, relevant supportive care, and access to coordinated pathways of care, will continue to be of paramount importance. Increasingly there is recognition that the delivery of safe, efficacious and effective care is reliant on co-design, where the voice of the patient has equal status to that of health professionals.

The purpose of this paper will be to illustrate the importance of co-design work as a critical component of informing the nursing research of tomorrow; in creating the knowledge to innovate nursing practice, and in transforming models of care to optimise patient experience and health outcomes. The paper will draw on data from three, nurse-led co-design studies to generate knowledge for cancer nursing practice today and tomorrow: 1) The development of innovative co-design communication-skills educational resources for nurses who work with people affected by cancer; 2) The development of a patient informed supportive care resource for people affected by pancreatic cancer and, 3) The development of patient and family informed pathways of care for frail older adults with cancer.

Professor Pamela Kulbok

*Theresa A. Thomas Professor of Primary Care Nursing and Professor of Public Health Sciences,
School of Nursing
University of Virginia, the United States*

Pamela is the Theresa A. Thomas Professor of Primary Care Nursing and Professor of Public Health Sciences at the University of Virginia (UVA). She is Coordinator of the Public Health Nursing (PHN) Leadership track and Acting Coordinator of the Health Systems Management (HSM) track of the MSN Program. Dr. Kulbok is a fellow in the American Academy of Nursing (AAN). She recently served as Co-Chair of the AAN Expert Panel on Environmental and Public Health. Dr. Kulbok is an editorial board member for Public Health Nursing, the Journal of Nursing Measurement, and the Online Journal of Issues in Nursing. She received the 2016 American Public Health Association (APHA), PHN Section, Ruth B. Freeman Distinguished Career Award. She was a member of the APHA, PHN Section workgroup to revise the Definition of Public Health Nursing (2013) and was Co-Chair of the American Nurses Association (ANA) workgroup that revised the Public Health Nursing: Scope and Standards of Practice (2013). Dr. Kulbok was principal investigator on several research grants including an inter-professional, cross-institution, three-year project funded by the Virginia Foundation for Healthy Youth: Partnering with Rural Youth and Parents to Design and Test a Substance Use Prevention Program. She co-directed advanced education nursing (AEN) training grants: 1) Nursing Leadership in Rural Health Care; and, 2) HSM and PHN Leadership. These grants led the UVA School of Nursing in the provision of quality, distance education for nurses living in rural areas of the South. She was an Inaugural Faculty and Faculty Fellow, Healthy Appalachia Institute, UVA's College at Wise, National Network of Public Institutes. She completed a four-year term on the ANA, Congress of Nursing Practice and Economics and was a contributor to Nursing's Social Policy Statement (2010). Dr. Kulbok also contributed to the Association of Community Health Nursing Educators (ACHNE) position papers on graduate education for public health nursing. She is a past president of ACHNE and two-term member of the Quad Council Coalition of PHN Organizations. She was a recipient of the UVA School of Nursing Distinguished Professor Award and the UVA USEMS Outstanding Teaching Award. Prior to her appointment as faculty at UVA, she was faculty at The Catholic University of America and the University of Illinois at Chicago where she directed public health nursing AEN training grants. She completed a post-doctoral traineeship in Psychiatric Epidemiology at Washington University, St. Louis, MO. She earned her master's degree in community health nursing and her undergraduate degree from Boston College and her doctoral degree from Boston University.

Local to Global Public Health "Matters": A Call to Nurses

When creating future nursing practice, education, and research, why does public health "matter"? To address this question, we must understand the context of transnational forces that are at play in health care. Significant national and global influences on the health of populations worldwide include innovations in healthcare delivery, as well as a range of threats to population health and health equity. Historical analysis is used to explore the influence of contextual forces on public health nursing in the United States and globally in the early decades of the twenty-first century. Seminal milestones of this period are analyzed to frame lessons learned and public health "matters" for the future. Opportunities and threats impact the capacity of public health nursing to promote population health. Opportunities include emphasis on the "triple aim," the "culture of health," and the "new public health." Threats include global conflicts, global disparities, emerging communicable diseases, and increased chronic illnesses. These milestones changed the landscape of PHN, yet the classic definition to promote and protect the health of populations endures. Growing interest in population health, in the throes of uncertain healthcare reforms, provides an imperative for nursing to reclaim a lead role in promoting health equity; to join with public and private partners; to utilize public health competencies and science; and to co-create a base of influence and power for social change and progress. Demonstrating that public health "matters" can provide meaningful opportunities to build upon assets, address challenges, reduce complacency, and leverage advocacy and optimism for the future.

Professor John Daly

Dean, Faculty of Health

*Head, WHO Collaborating Centre for Nursing, Midwifery & Health Development
University of Technology Sydney, Australia*

Professor Daly is an active professional and academic leader, educator, administrator, consultant, researcher, author and editor. He has published widely on leadership in nursing and health, nursing education, cardiovascular health, role transition in nursing, aged care, cross-cultural nursing and nursing workforce issues. Professor Daly is a former Chair of the Global Alliance for Leadership in Nursing Education and Science (GANES), a former Chair of the Council of Deans of Nursing and Midwifery (Australia and New Zealand) and former Editor-In-Chief of Collegian: The Australian Journal of Nursing Practice, Scholarship & Research (the refereed journal of the Australian College of Nursing which is published by Elsevier) a position he held for 9 years.

Professor Daly has served on many committees and working parties over many years with local, national and international organizations including: NSW Health, The Health-Science Alliance, Sydney Alliance for Healthcare, Research & Training (SAHRT), the Council of Deans of Nursing & Midwifery (Australia and New Zealand), the World Health Organization, Sigma Theta Tau International (STTI), and the International Network for Doctoral Education in Nursing. He is a member of the Board of Directors of AccessUTS, the Health Science Alliance and the Council of the Academic Health Science Partnership (AHSP).

In 2008 Professor Daly was awarded the title Emeritus Professor by the University of Western Sydney for distinguished service to the university and contributions to the discipline and profession of nursing at national and international levels. In 2013 he was elected to Fellowship in the American Academy of Nursing (FAAN). In July 2014 he was invested as Secretary-General for the Global Network of World Health Organization Collaborating Centres for Nursing & Midwifery (www.globalnetworkwhocc.com), and he was the only Australian nurse academic appointed to the STTI Global Advisory Panel on the Future of Nursing (GAPFON). Professor Daly continues to play an active leadership role in academic publishing having been appointed to the position of Editor-In-Chief of the Journal of Nursing Management (Wiley, Oxford) in August, 2014. In 2016 he was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Nursing by Oxford Brookes University, UK in recognition of outstanding contribution to the pursuit of academic excellence. He currently holds a number of adjunct, conjoint or visiting appointments with other academic institutions including: Curtin University, Huazhong University of Science & Technology (HUST), Wuhan, China, and Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, USA.

Nursing Leadership in Advancing Global Health

This paper presents a summary of nursing leadership projects and innovations in which the author is currently involved with a number of leading international organisations which are aligned, and collaborative in nature. It includes an overview of contemporary international nursing leadership strategy, and provides concrete examples of how advances can be achieved through consensus building and purposeful collaboration with benefits for the discipline and profession of nursing, population health and health system strengthening. The paper includes a review of the role of the World Health Organisation in advancing global health taking account of the Sustainable Development Goals (SDG's), analysis of barriers and facilitators to implementation of the SDG's and Global strategic directions for strengthening nursing and midwifery 2016-2020, and discussion of leadership priorities and strategies for nursing to further enhance professional and disciplinary contributions to improving global health.

To make a difference in people's lives through clinical excellence and price assurance

Transparency & Price Assurance

All-inclusive, priced-assured medical packages and accurate fee estimates bring patients peace of mind, while its strong partnerships with insurers ensure that package costs are fully or mostly covered by insurance plans.

Innovation & Quality

Support from a global healthcare group of 50 hospitals worldwide and with The University of Hong Kong as an exclusive clinical partner allows GHK to bring in new technologies and best practice and drive clinical excellence and continuous improvement.

Service & Comfort

Healing environment with 2-bedded standard rooms and en-suite semi-private rooms are complemented by patient-centric facilities and immediately available services.
